GENERAL ELY S. PARKER STRICKEN.

HE TUFFERS PARTIAL PARALYSIS-HE WAS GEN-ERAL GRANT'S MILITARY SECRETARY.

General Ely S. Parker, who was on General Grant's staff in the war, and has been a deputy clerk at Police Headquarters for a number of years, was stricken with paralysis in his office yesterday, and was four years old, but his appearance is that of a wellerved man under sixty. For several days he had preserved man under sixty. For several days he had complained of pain and numbness in his left side. Soon after noon yesterday he lay down on a lounge and said he wished to have a physician called. Dr. John T. Nagle, of the Health Department, examined General Farker and said there were symptoms of par-alysis in the left side, as the General's left arm and leg were powerless. The stroke was a slight one ap-parently, Dr. Nagle said, and he advised that General Parker should lie quiet until his family physician could be called to see him. Later it was thought best to sen! General Parker to the hospital, because his family had gone to Denver to spend the summer. The annual afternoon and evening picule and games A private room at the hospital was placed at his dis posal by Superintendent Ludlam. It was said later that he seemed to be recovering.

General Parker is a Seneca Indian of full blood and a lineal descendant of the famous chief Red Jacket. He has all of the medals which were presented to Red Jacket by the United States Government. He was the chief of the Six Nations of Indians at one time, but let his brother have the office. Early in his life he was sent to school in Troy. He also studied engineering, and he obtained employment as an engineer in one of the bureaus of the Government. At the outbreak of the war he became a colonel of engineers, under General "Baidy" Smith. Later he became General Grant's military scretary, and was on the General's staff mull the close of the war. He wrote from General Grant's dictation the terms of capitulation at the surrender of Lee.

He was brevetted a brigadier-general upon his retirement from the army. During a part of General Grant's term as Prestient a Government offce was held by General Parker. Later, through the good offices of General Smith, he was placed in charge of the Rureau of Repairs and Supplies at Police Headquarters. His Indian name is Done he gaven, which means open door. According to his story, told to the clerk of the court, he left Warsaw six months ago to come to America, promising to send for his sweeteart as soon as he had carned sufficient money. Six weeks ago he forwarded the young woman a steamship ticket and $150 in money. He was at the pier when the steamer arrived a week ago. Instead of tinding his bride alone, she was accompanied by a tail man, who, she said, was her husband. They met on the train from Warsaw to Antwerp, and had fallen in love. From reaching Antwerp they were married.

"When I asked Constanta about her action," added Lansen, "she declared that she couldn't help it. I asked her for the money and jeweirs I had given her but she said her instand wouldn't let her return them. I then left them, and have since learned that they are living in the Eastern District of Brooklyn." Lansen had fitted up apartments at a cost of $300 for his intended bride, and is nearly heartbroken over the affor.
